1.5.2	Prepayment fee for loans to consumers granted from 12 June 2008 – 31 October 2013*	0 - 2%
	* Prepayment fee calculated using discounted cash flow to reflect real loss of lender. Maximum prepayment fee is 2% of the amount being repaid. Unless agreed otherwise in the terms of the loan. If loan bears variable interest no fee is charged.		↑
1.5.3	Prepayment fee for consumer loans granted from 1 November 2013 – until entry into force of new laws 1 April 2017*	0 - 1%
	* Prepayment fee calculated using discounted cash flow to reflect real loss of lender. Individual borrowers are permitted to pay up to ISK 1 million a year on the mortgage without incurring a prepayment fee. If loan bears variable interest no fee is charged.
1.5.4	Prepayment fee for on consumer mortgage loans granted from 1 April 2017*	0 - 1%

^{*} Prepayment fee is calculated using discounted cash flow to reflect real loss of lender. The prepayment fee does not exceed 0.2% for each whole year remaining of the fixed interest period of the mortgage loan, although it is a maximum of the amount equal to the Bank's costs or 1% of repayment. Consumers do not need to pay a prepayment fee if interest on comparable mortgage loans with fixed interest, offered by the Bank at that time, are equal to or higher than the interest on the loan to be paid up. Consumers are permitted to pay up to ISK 1 million a year on the mortgage without incurring a prepayment fee. There is no prepayment fee if the period between repayments and the end of the loan period is less than one year. If a loan bears variable interest no prepayment fee is charged.
